

'The facilitator is not the fountain of all wisdom. Instead the facilitator should be the catalyst that makes things happen'

▶ GROUP FACILITATION SKILLS

A group facilitator is the catalyst that makes things happen not the fountain of all wisdom. This is one of the hardest roles to play in any form a group work. Most of us are used to participating in a task to get a job done. The role of the facilitator is not to do the job but to ensure that the job is done by minimising pointless arguments, maximising the individual strengths of every member of the group and maintaining a constructive approach to the task.

WHO IS IT FOR?

- This is an excellent introduction for a newly appointed team leader
- The workshop will provide a superb grounding for the first-time supervisor
- It is an extremely effective workshop when introducing empowerment or participative management to your management team
- The workshop provides vital skills for anyone required to deliver or facilitate a training session or corporate seminar

WHAT WILL IT COVER?

This is an extremely practical workshop which will provide many opportunities for participants to practice their facilitation skills in a wide variety of scenarios. It will cover subjects such as:

- The role of the facilitator
- Developing and supporting the group
- Discussion leading
- Socratic direction
- Conflict resolution
- Recording progress
- Ensuring follow-up

COURSE DURATION:

1 DAY

NUMBER OF PARTICIPANTS:

6-8